INTRODUCTORY NOTES

This bi-weekly report of major operating statistics covers the period from November 20th through December 2nd, inclusive, and presents salient information concerning operations for the two-week period and cumulatively through December 2nd.

In previous reports data on complaints have been presented showing the number received, the number of complaints analyzed, and also a breakdown of the complaints according to classification after analysis. The number of complaints received or analyzed or classified at one time, during the early stage of enforcement activity, were significant measures. At that time it was important to know, for administrative control, the volume of the receipt of complaints and the rate at which these complaints were being handled. The complaints had to be classified so as to determine which cases were to be investigated.

Now, since the complaint analysis process has become a more or less mechanical one and since the attention of the Division is focused on case investigations, the presentation of data on complaints will be modified. All data concerning complaints will be expressed in terms of establishments complained against. Each establishment complained against represents one potential case unit. The number of complaints received or the number of presumably valid complaints are not good measures of case inspection requirements. A factor of reduction must be recognized because, in many instances, more than one complaint is directed against the same establishment. Thus, while over 32,000 complaints have been received, only 24,553 establishments were complained against and of these, only 15,899 appeared to be violating the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act. These 15,899 establishments constitute the 15,899 cases, which is the overall work load of the inspection staff. In other words, the case load is less than half of the complaint load. It may be well to make this clear in discussions with people as to the volume of work confronting the Division. Through misinterpretation and error in expression, many persons erroneously speak of the Division's task as involving the investigation of over 32,000 complaints. Actually, we have only about 16,000 cases to investigate.

Approximately 20 per cent of the cases requiring inspection have been assigned to investigators. Of the 15,899 case inspections required, 3,928 have been assigned. There have been 866 case investigations completed and in addition to these, there are a number of case inspections for which reports have been submitted by inspectors but which have not yet been considered completed because they are pending review by supervising inspectors or review by the Washington office.

There is included in this report for the first time statistical data showing enforcement activity by regions. These data are presented in a set of tables following the regular summary data in this bi-weekly report. These tables present selected information and are numbered to correspond with the item numbers that appear in the main body of this report.

During the past two weeks, the field staff of the Wage and Hour Division brought to a conclusion 64 more investigations making a total of 866 investigations completed. (See Item F and Table B-1). Of these, 562, or approximately 65 per cent of the total, were closed by settlement and 304, or 35 per cent, were dropped because no violation was found or because the firm was not covered.

The amount of restitution of back wages reported is $243,362. This has been paid to 17,717 employees. The amount of restitution reported does not represent the total amount of restitution secured. Where a promise to pay has been effected, this is not included in the data presented. It is only when the restitution has been actually paid and the back payments witnessed by the inspector or evidence of back payment is available in the form of back payment receipts that these data are reported. It is contemplated that the reporting of restitution will be changed to cover the amount agreed to be paid, as well as the amount actually paid in cases where settlement has been made. It is estimated that close to $1,000,000 in back payments have been agreed upon in negotiation between wage-hour representatives and employers found guilty of violations, including those employers against whom legal action was instituted.

While 64 cases were completed, there were 1,007 new cases added to the work load during the period from November 20th through December 2nd. In fact, the number of new cases added exceeded the total number of cases completed from the beginning of the program.

The inspectors have finished their investigations, and have transmitted 2,061 case reports to Washington. Of these, 866 have been closed as reported above. The status of the remaining case reports are as follows: 760 are in the process of reinspection; 36 are undergoing legal action, either civil or criminal; 140 are under consideration by the Legal Branch or the Department of Justice; and the remaining 259 case reports are either in transit to the central office or are in the hands of the Examining Unit in Washington. Item E-3 shows a balance of 265 cases on hand in the Examining Unit in the central office. The reason for the difference is due to the fact that the latter figure includes reinspection reports as well as original inspection reports.

With the change in procedure based on Field Letter No. 3, which eliminates the necessity for the submission of case reports to the central office for approval before the case may be closed in all instances where the amount involved is less than $50,000, the rate at which completed cases will be received will undoubtedly increase.

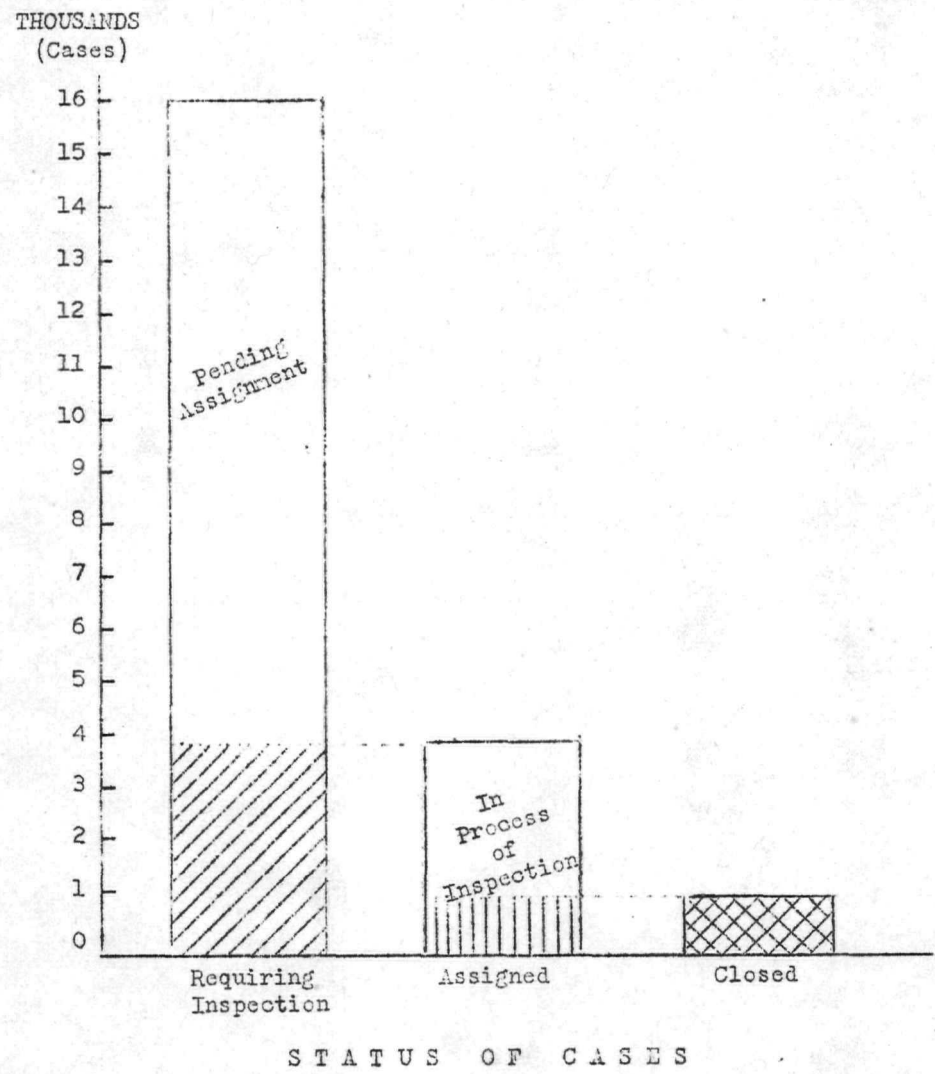

At the present time the examination of case reports by the central office is a pre-review. Hereafter, the examination of the reports will constitute a post-review in all cases where the amount is less than $50,000. This will necessitate the presentation of data in Item E of this report in a different manner so as to distinguish between those cases submitted for review and those cases submitted for authority to complete. This adjustment will be made in the very near future.

Since the last report was issued on November 18, 1939, the following legal actions were taken. There were 6 new criminal actions instituted and 4 criminal actions closed, the defendants having plead guilty. Fines totaling $35,500 were imposed, of which $15,500 was actually collected. To date, 33 criminal convictions have been obtained involving fines amounting to over $500,000. There were 9 civil actions instituted during the two-week period, bringing the total of civil cases to 60. Eight injunctions were obtained. The total number of cases closed by civil action is now 52, leaving 8 cases pending.

The ratio of cases in litigation to case inspections reported is almost six per cent. In other words, six out of every hundred case reports submitted by inspectors resulted in legal action.
